

Deep Learning is a subset of machine learning that uses neural networks with multiple hidden layers. It is commonly used in image recognition, speech processing, and natural language processing. Deep learning models learn complex patterns from large datasets.